

CITATION

The study developed a Criminological Conceptual Model for understanding transitions of female victims to perpetrators of domestic violence, by using the Feminist, Social Learning, Strain, and Trauma Theories. This model offers a comprehensive framework for understanding and addressing the dual roles female victims may occupy in the cycle of domestic violence. This study contributed to criminological scholarship and policy development by offering evidence-based insights that can inform targeted prevention, intervention and rehabilitation strategies tailored to the South African context. She published one research article and the other two are under copyediting and production phases. This work has been presented at a National conference (Cape Town),
